The Software Development Process

Our first step is to assess the requirements of your project and work out a detailed budget to minimize your development costs. Next, we create a detailed design plan of the application. Every important detail of the design is communicated with you to ensure that the software solution exactly meets your needs. Next we begin to write the code that powers your application, where each line of code is thoroughly tested to ensure the highest level of quality assurance. As the project evolves, you are able to review the progress and offer feedback. After the project is finished, FreedomForge offers ongoing support and maintenance services to bring a software solution that delivers value for many years to come.
